NEXT GENERATION HAS YOU COVERED

Dedicated Educators,

This month, we are focused on the theme: democracy and civic education.

Our resources aim to explore democracy and the election process beyond voting to give students an opportunity to learn about the root causes of unrest, division, and societal inequities. This month, we also explore the importance of civic engagement and public policy in fostering a more democratic and just society.

Democracy Education Lesson Plan

This lesson plan includes three worksheets that explore ways of addressing root causes of systemic injustice through civic engagement. Students will reflect on the significance of different policies and different methods of engagement with the democratic process before, during and after an election.

Civic Engagement in Schools

We live in a time of division and crisis in democracies around the world. This instability is a stark reminder that sustaining a living democracy stands on precarious ground. Given these high stakes, how can we teach about the importance of democracy and the significance of youth engagement in the democratic process? Learn about how civic engagement can be fostered in schools in this month's featured blog post.

The Next Generation program supports young people with the tools to dismantle prejudice, address root causes of conflict, and become leaders for a most just world.

Through our partnerships with educators across the country, we offer free interactive workshops, online learning modules, educator resources and professional development opportunities that are all rooted in trauma-informed, culturally relevant + responsive, anti-racist and anti-oppressive frameworks.
